Cyberspace Operations Experiment Controller

Introduction

Allied Command Transformation (ACT) is the NATO warfare development command. The cyberspace branch is responsible, among others, for developing appropriate cyberspace warfare products, able to anticipate and resolve how warfare will evolve in cyberspace. The outcomes of these warfare development activities are often the source for development of forward looking cyberspace warfare capabilities. Warfare development (including the one in cyberspace) entails multiple activities, including strategic foresight analysis, horizon scanning, comparative warfare analysis, concept development, functional decomposition and analysis, feasibility studies, innovation, and experimentation.

ACT's cyberspace technical director is responsible for the cyberspace experimentation campaign. The technical director oversees a number of annual experiments aimed to prove warfare development hypothesis in pursue of advanced concepts and capabilities. Such concepts and capabilities aim to support the NATO technical and operational communities.

Setting up and conducting experiments demand multidisciplinary teams made from several NATO entities, industry and academia. They involve the technical, operational and in some cases the legal and policy communities of interest. The activities range from hypothesis development, experiment planning, overseeing industry and academia and coordinating schedules, venues and events, to name a few.

This document contains the Statement of Work (SoW) for a Subject Matter Expert (SME) – experiment controller- to support ACT's technical director in the definition, planning, execution and reporting of the ACT cyberspace experimentation campaign. - Liaise with other NATO entities, nations, industry and academia to have the experiments staffed with adequate representation.
- Support the experiment implementation, by providing/developing the supporting infrastructure, services, virtual machines, network connections, etc. As a clarification, the incumbent shall be able and will have to implement, configure and operate real and virtual network and computing infrastructure.
- Support the technical director in orchestrating the experiments execution, by coordinating experimentation events, locations, participation, ensuring availability of assets, etc.
- Coordinate, compile contributions and produce final experiment products, including hardware and software prototypes, documentation and reports, presentations, etc.

HQ SACT Special Terms and Conditions for Commercial Personnel Services Contracts

1. Scope. These special terms and conditions address all issues pertaining to the Commercial Personnel Services to be rendered by the Contractor to HQ SACT under this Contract, thereby taking precedence over the HQ SACT General Terms and Conditions.
